PREFACE

The present work completes the publication of the lists of personal names compiled in the Temple School of Nippur and unearthed by the several expeditions of the University of Pennsylvania. It was the writer's plan to publish in this part only the lists containing Sumerian names, and to add in appendix (Texts 51 to 57) some other tablets of the same general character which had been excavated by Dr. Peters at Yokha. But, while the work was in the course of preparation, other tablets were discovered, some of which should properly have been incorporated in the two preceding parts. Some of these new texts, being practically duplicates of others already published, have been dismissed with a brief mention. Others, however, merit publication and have been added to the volume after the Yokha tablets.

The addition of new texts, at a time when the work was nearly complete, necessitated some alterations in the order of succession of the names, and in some instances additional numbers, marked with letters, had to be inserted. All things considered, this little flaw is more than overbalanced by the unusual value of some of the added texts.

It is my pleasant duty to acknowledge my indebtedness to Prof. Morris Jastrow, Jr., for many important suggestions as to the interpretation of the names. My sincere thanks go also to Dr. G. B. Gordon, the Director of the University Museum, for having offered all possible help in the preparation of this work.

INTRODUCTION

NEW CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE FIELD

Since the publication of the first two parts of the present volume an important contribution to the study of onomastics has appeared in a series of articles on "Names" in Hasting's Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics. These are the work of several scholars and contain a wealth of valuable information. Of especial interest to us are the articles of Prof. A. T. Clay on "Babylonian Personal Names" and of S. Langdon on "Sumerian Names." Prof. Clay's work is concise and illuminating, and the writer regrets that it did not reach him in time for discussion in the introduction of his "Lists of Akkadian Personal Names." At present, he can do little else than to recommend it to the attention of scholars. Dr. Langdon's article is a valuable contribution to the difficult field of Sumerian onomastics. Its appearance offers a welcome opportunity for a fresh discussion of the whole subject.

Langdon divides Sumerian names in two large groups: (I) Names which represent a complete grammatical sentence and (II) Names composed of construct and genitive. The very large material under the first heading he further subdivides into: (1) Names referring to the cult of Mother Earth and her brother Tammuz; (2) Names referring to the goddess of begetting and weeping mother; (3) Names referring to the word of god; (4) Names taken from historical inscriptions; (5) Names taken from incantation texts; (6) Names referring to legends; (7) Names referring to sacred places, cities, temples, shrines; (8)

Names referring to personal interests of the individual; (9) Names referring to temporal kings; (10) Names asserting attributes of gods, adoration of their powers, etc.

It is clear, however, that subdivisions of this character could be multiplied ad infinitum, since the material covered by the names is most varied. Moreover, the subdivisions overlap, since a name may refer to the Mother goddess or to the word of god, etc., and, at the same time, have been taken from an historical inscription or from an incantation text, etc.

Under the second heading, "Names composed of construct and genitive," he places names compounded with amar-, KA+ŠU-ša-, gim- and lù-. It is strange that he should have omitted the largest group of all, i. e., those compounded with ur-. In Sumerian names, ur- is practically equivalent in meaning with lù-; gim, in feminine names, corresponds to the lù- and ur- in masculine names. Langdon himself recognizes that the whole of his second group logically belongs to the eighth subdivision of the first group. In view of such overlapping, the entire system of classification becomes faulty. Furthermore, the list of names collected under the second heading is far from being exhaustive. Besides ur-, amar, gim, lù-, the author should have added at least arad-, AZAG-, bur-, inim-, nig-, zà-.

AKKADIAN AND SUMERIAN NAMES

Again, it is to be noted that the names compounded with KA+ŠU-ša-, or KA+GAR-ša-, are not Sumerian but Akkadian. Ša is undoubtedly the Semitic relative, and the clear Semitic character of these names is proved by such combinations as Ka+ŠU-ša-a-bi, +ê-a, +ì-lí, +iš-tár, +^ala-ga-ma-al, etc.

This confusion between Sumerian and Akkadian names necessitates a new investigation of the whole question. Langdon,

e. g., asserts that "In the texts from the Sargonic period onward it is not easy to decide whether a name is to be read in Sumerian or to be translated into Semitic. For example, Šar-ru-GI-ì-lí, in which kin is represented by the Sumerian gi, which means kinu, 'faithful.'"

Now, while a certain difficulty in distinguishing Sumerian and Akkadian names does exist, the difficulty has been very much exaggerated. The name Šar-ru-GI-ì-lí is not difficult to explain. It is undoubtedly Akkadian and to be read entirely in that language. The only irregularity—a minor one at that—lies in the circumstance that the Sumerian phonetic value gin for the sign gi has been used instead of the Akkadian phonetic value kin, gin. Such a confusion is common in texts of the older period. When the Sumerians began to write down the foreign names of their Semitic neighbors they used indiscriminately any sign the phonetic value of which seemed to them best to represent the sound of the name to be written. Gradually a certain degree of systematization was reached, and it is in most cases possible to determine whether the phonetic value of a sign is to be regarded as purely Sumerian or purely Akkadian. Thus we find in early documents a large number of Akkadian names appearing under the guise of Sumerian phonetic writing: ID-NE-NI-A = awîlija, ID-NE-LUM = awîlum, UM-MI-DA-BĀD = ummi-tâbat, DA-URU-BU = taribu, SAL+KU-ID-MI-NI-KU = SAL+KU-awîlišu. Examples of this kind could be multiplied, but this would carry us beyond the limits of space in which this discussion must be kept. The writer expects shortly to publish a separate article on this subject.

At first sight a doubt may exist in the case of some names as to the language to which they belong, but a definite decision can generally be reached. In those instances in which a part of the name is certainly Akkadian, there can be no doubt that the whole name is Akkadian and is to be read as such. What appears to be Sumerian will turn out to be a Sumerian phonetic writing of the Akkadian.

Naturally, no one would attempt to translate into Akkadian and to read in Akkadian a purely Sumerian name. The uncertainty arises only in the case of names composed of construct and genitive: the noun is generally written ideographically, and the second element of the name is, in the largest majority of instances, the name of a god or of a deified object. But even in this case we have several good rules to guide us in our choice:

(1) The name of the god mentioned. A large number of names of gods are used exclusively in Sumerian names, such as en-ki, nanna, ninni, etc.¹ Others are exclusively Semitic, such as ê-a, iš-tár, da-gan, etc. Whenever one of such gods is mentioned in a name, there is no doubt as to its language. There is, however, another class of god's names which may be used in both Akkadian and Sumerian, such as AN, EN-LIL, EN-ZU, etc. In this case other criteria need to be applied.

(2) From the time of the First Dynasty back to the earliest time, that is through the period in which the confusion between the two languages is most likely to appear, a Semitic verbal form is always written phonetically, never ideographically. In addition to this, a Semitic verbal form generally precedes the noun, while the Sumerian always follows it.

(3) This tendency of writing the Semitic element phoneti-

cally is also very pronounced even in the case of nouns, so that one might say that the old scribes themselves did their very best to avoid confusion between Sumerian and Akkadian. Thus they wrote a-wi-il, instead of using the ideograph lù, wa-ra-ad, instead of uru, etc. Moreover, even in the case of those words which are generally represented ideographically, such as kù(=AZAG)-, ŠU-, KA+ŠU-, etc., we can apply a rule similar to that used for the names of gods. Some of these elements are used in Akkadian and some in Sumerian names, but not any of them is used indiscriminately in both languages. Thus in the case of a name like ŠU-^d*en-líl*, the deciding factor is not the name of the god, which can be used either in Sumerian or in Akkadian, but the ideograph ŠU-, which is only used in connection with names of Semitic gods. On the other hand, Kù(=AZAG)-^d*UD* cannot be read ellit-^d*šamaš* or kasap-^d*šamaš*, because kù is exclusively used in Sumerian names.

Bearing these facts in mind, it will not be difficult to decide, in practically every case, the language to which a given name may belong. And even if some names, despite these criteria, should resist definite identification, the very small number of such as remain in doubt justify us in declaring that the problem of distinguishing between Sumerian and Akkadian names has been practically solved.

NAMES FROM LITERATURE

In the article above quoted, Langdon makes a real contribution to the study of Sumerian names, in bringing out two facts: (1) That some Sumerian names have been bodily taken out of existing literature, and (2) That a very large number of such names are abbreviated. His contention is substantiated by the texts published in this volume. We find that the historical inscriptions, the liturgies, the hymns and, in general, every class of literature have contributed their share. As a rule, the scribes have selected for their personal names some sentences containing attributes of gods, such as sīb-šà-aṣag-gi-pad-da, nin-kal-la, nin-šag-ga, etc. But this is not always the case. Some names are sentences, recording facts or expressing wishes or regrets, which are very poorly adapted for their new rôle and, unless clearly designated as names by their context, would never be recognized as such. Cf. mà-a-gè-eš ġé-ti (Pt. I, 296), translated in Akkadian as aš-šum-ia li-[ib-lu], and which is very similar to the greeting formulas in old Babylonian letters: *aš-šum-mi-i-a li-ba-al-li-du-ka*¹; á-lù-bad (Pt. I, 349), translated a-bu-lap we-di-im, a-bu-lap mi-ti-im; bád-uru-na mu-un-gi-en, "The wall of his city he has made firm" (Pt. I, 231).

In some instances the attempt has been made to give such phrases the aspect of personal names, by adding to them the sign ur- or nin-, etc. This makes the work of the translator even more difficult, and sometimes produces ludicrous results. Thus we have ur-lù-ġa-ma-ti (Pt. III, 852), "The servant of 'May the Lord live for my sake!,'" or nin-a-lù-ni (Pt. III, 1122), "The lady of 'How long her lord....?'"

In many instances, the phrases selected to serve as personal names were of such length as to be entirely unadapted for everyday use. The scribes therefore resorted to abbreviation. They may or may not have relied on the fact that the phrase in question was sufficiently well known to be recognized, even in an abbreviated form. Two tablets published in this volume, Nos. 27 and 29, are duplicates of the same text. But while

No. 27, a large tablet, gives the names in full, No. 29 abbreviates them in some instances to about one half their original length. Unfortunately both tablets are in a poor state of preservation, so that the identification of some signs remains in doubt, and consequently also the translation. Among the longest names contained in tablet 27 we find (a): ur-nisag-gè ^{22?} šú-man-e nu-mu-un-zi-ra a si-i-im-zi; (b) ur-al-ê'(d)-de ²¹⁵ igi-dú(?) al-ê'(d)-de ba-ni-ib-sí-gi (Pt. III, 1006, 1010). The tablet has other names of equal length, but only partially preserved.

It is not at all strange that names of this kind should have been abbreviated. But in their endeavor to save time and effort the old Babylonian scribes managed to mutilate even much shorter names. Thus síb-šà-aṣag-gi-pad-da has been variously abbreviated as síb, síb-šà-aṣag-gi, šà-aṣag-gi, aṣag-gi, gi-pad-da, pad-da. All these names occur in the documents and all are to be traced back to a common original.

Thus we see that, in order to shorten a name, the scribes did not always resort to the expedient of cutting it off at one end, but chose at random any element which appeared to them to be sufficiently representative of the complete name.

This practice makes the work of the interpreter much more difficult than would at first appear. In many instances, the fact that a name can be easily translated, without violating any rule of grammar, is no proof that the meaning attached to it is the right one. To be able to decide the point, one must be positive that the name has not been abbreviated and, if it has, what is the complete form. Unless we obtain this certitude, no translation can be relied upon as necessarily correct. Thus in the case of SAL+KU-là-ra (Pt. III, 1143) the verbal form is missing and a translation "Sister to the man" would be entirely misleading. In the same way SAL+KU-da (Pt. III, 1138) and šeš-da (Pt. III, 1191) must be compared with lugal-da, which in its turn is an abbreviation of lugal-da-nu-me-a, "To the king there is not (a rival)."

CHARACTER OF THE TEXTS

The lists of Sumerian names here published are similar in their construction to those of Akkadian names which have appeared in the second part of this work. Here, as there, the names are divided according to the initial element with which they are compounded. It is worth noticing that all these Sumerian names are religious in character. A large number of them, such as those compounded with ur-, lù-, arad-, gê'me-, clearly state the worshipper's relation to the deity; others, in which the first element is the name of a god, have the primary purpose of praising the deity's special attributes; still another group, formed by names compounded with lugal-, SAL+KU-, nin-, šeš-, etc., belong to the class of theophorous names, because the terms king, sister, lady, brother, etc. refer directly to gods. This is established by the fact that quite a number of the names here published, and which are compounded with lugal-, nin-, etc. are identical with others formed with names of deities. In addition to this, some names of this character have been found in the documents preceded by the determinative for deity, and are therefore to be classed with the names of gods. Instances of this kind are: lugal-an-ni (No. 265), an abbreviation of lugal-an-ni-pad-da (PB, 1872); lugal-á-zi-da (No. 227=PB, 1859); lugal-dû-aṣag-ga (No. 230=PB, 1905); lugal-ġé-gál (No. 214=PB, 1936); lugal-me-lám (No. 205=PB, 1981); lugal-nir-gál (No. 224=PB, 1988).

These divine names are not to be considered as the personal names of the gods, but simply as appellatives. It is difficult to decide whether the term lugal was applied to the chief god of the city or to the deity to whom the worshipper was especially devoted, i. e., his patron god. From what we learn in incantation texts, where every suppliant is wont to dwell at length on the special merits and attributes of his own chosen deity, one is led to infer that lugal is probably the protecting god of the individual. In the same way, the names compounded with nin will refer either to the chief goddess of the city, or to the protecting goddess of the individual worshipper. We must note, however, that quite a large number of the names compounded with nin will probably refer exclusively to "Ninni, the lady par excellence."

The lists of Sumerian names differ chiefly from the Akkadian, in not showing the artificiality of which notice has been made in the introduction of Pt. II¹. With the exception of two lists of names compounded with SAL+KU and šeš, which are practically identical, the Sumerian lists compounded with different initial elements fall into distinct categories, and there is little or no possibility of restoring doubtful names by analogy with others.

Whatever agreement there may be between two lists is never carried very far, and the order of succession of the names is also generally different. Even in theophorous names compounded with lù-d, ur-d, gê-me-d, kù-d, etc., the names of the gods mentioned and the order in which they are given is not always the same. In fact this differentiation is carried to such an extent that in some cases two tablets, containing the same group of names, greatly differ from one another.

This has rendered the task of restoring a complete text out of the many tablets and fragments very difficult and, to avoid unnecessary confusion, the most irregular documents have been transliterated separately.

A tendency towards artificiality, one might even say systematization, is to be noticed in the very large number of names compounded with the element ur. In compiling such lists, the scribes began with stating the object of worship, such as "the street, the gate, the sheepfold," etc., and then proceeded to enumerate in detail the special characteristics of the objects mentioned, as the "large street, the holy street," etc. It so happens that many of these characteristics are common to the different objects, so that these groups of names are strikingly similar. But the tendency to make all of them identical in their contents has been resisted. A comparison of the various groups will show that they do not entirely agree. Cf. ur-sil (No. 728 ff.) with ur-dúr-dingir (591 ff.), ur-me (619 ff.), ur-šešlam (725 ff.), ur-USLAN+GUNU (835 ff.), ur-ká (873 ff.) and ur-amaš (908 ff.)

A good illustration of this differentiation is found in section 728 ff. There a group embracing the names ur-sil, ur-sil-úr-ra, ur-sil-dúr-ra, ur-sil-aṣag, ur-sil-sag, ur-sil-maḡ, ur-sil-ṣi-da, ur-sil-gíd-da, ur-sil-sû, ur-sil-ninnû, ur-sil-dagal-la, ur-sil-si-ga, is immediately followed by another group of entirely different composition: ur-ê, ur-ê+ḡi-li, ur-ê+líl-lá, ur-ê+bur-ra, ur-ê+el-lu?, ur-ê+ḡir-su, ur-ê, ur-ê-dú-a, ur-ê-gé-a, ur-ê-nun-na.

THE GROUPING OF THE NAMES

In the lists here published the grouping of the names does not follow any hard and fast rule, as was the case in the Syllabary, where a definite arrangement was consistently followed.¹

¹ Cf. discussion on p. 29 ff.

Yet the scribes did not place together at random all the names that could be formed with any given initial element. A certain order can still be observed, though in some instances the reasons that may have prompted the compilers to decide on the order of succession of the different names are difficult to determine. In a general way, one may say that the names in our lists are grouped together according to the following principles:

(1) Their similarity in meaning. Thus we find that the name ur-dúr, "Servant of the dog," is immediately followed by ur-nim, "Servant of the fly," ur-nig, "Servant of the bitch," ur-...^{ga}, "Servant of the...-fish." In the same way we see grouped together the names ama-UGU, ama-gan, ama-ù-tud, ama-nu-ù-tud, ama-a-tud (Nos. 1640 ff.), all having reference to the goddess in her quality of mother. The natural association of ideas between the terms shepherd and protector has probably influenced the scribe in placing together the names lugal-síb, lugal-síb-kalam-ma, lugal-uru, lugal-urigal (Nos. 318 ff.). Names containing geographical elements are naturally brought together: lù-nibru^{ki}, lù-urí^{ki}, lù-ì-si-in^{ki}-na, which are followed by other names of places, the sequence being only interrupted, with no apparent reason, by lù-làl-pad-da (No. 118) and lù-sá-dug (No. 122).

(2) Identity of the first sign. Here belong the large groups which have one element in common and which have been discussed above.¹ In many of the names, the identity of the first sign will also produce a similarity of meaning, but this is apparently secondary. Cf. nin-gé-gál, nin-gé-dū, nin-gé-dū-an-na (Nos. 1167 ff.); lugal-á-zi-da, lugal-á-maĝ, lugal-á-dáĝ (Nos. 226 ff.); ^anin-líl-zi, ^anin-líl-zi-mu, ^anin-líl-zi-šà-gál, ^anin-líl-zi-kalam-ma (Nos. 1284 ff.).

(3) Identity of the last signs. Thus ur-áš-bar-ra is followed by ur-gi-bar-ra (Nos. 653–54) and lugal-gab-gál by lugal-nir-gál and lugal-ab-gál (Nos. 223–25). One of the clearest instances in which the order of succession of the different names has been due entirely to the signs employed in their construction is found in Nos. 766 ff.: ur-gi, ur-gi-gi, ur-gi-éš, ur-gi-tún, ur-tún, ur-tún-za, ur-gír, ur-gír-za, ur-za-na, ur-za-na-ru, ur-na...., ur-na....

(4) Shape of the signs. Names compounded with the same sign, though employed with different meanings and with different phonetic values, are grouped together: ur-éš (sign AB), ur-éš-a, ur-unu (sign AB+ŠEŠŠIG); ur-ab, ur-abzu (Nos. 685 ff.).

Sometimes in our texts the same name is repeated twice or oftener without variation. But since this happens only in names formed with a noun in the construct and the genitive, and never in the case of those embodying a complete grammatical sentence, it follows that we must assume different phonetic values for the second element of the names thus repeated. So, e. g., ur-PA appears four times, and I have assigned to the four names the most common values ur-pa, ur-gud, ur-sìg, ur-kun (Nos. 853 ff.). Similarly ur-UŠ, appearing three times, is to be transliterated as ur-uš, ur-giš, ur-guruš (Nos. 681 ff.). But in some instances it is difficult to decide what phonetic values the scribe intended to use. So in ur-KI-IZI, the group KI-IZI has quite a number of different values and meanings¹ and our tablet is broken after the ideograph had been repeated three times. Since we do not know in how many names the same element was intended to be used, it is impossible to assign any value or meaning to the remaining three.

This repetition of the same ideograph occurs very frequently also when the second element is a geographical name. So we may argue that there must have been at least three cities called BĀD^{ki}, since lù-BĀD^{ki} recurs three times (Nos. 199 ff.). But even in this respect our documents do not always agree. One of our texts seems to recognize only two cities with that name. In the same way, lù-A-ĜA^{ki} (No. 123 ff.) is generally repeated twice, except in a single text which reproduces it three times. Are we to deduce from this that the third city called A-ĜA^{ki} was of little importance, and therefore generally omitted, or shall we attribute the variant to the carelessness of the scribe?

(5) Grammatical construction. In a last subdivision we may place the names which fall together because they are identical in their grammatical construction. For example: lù-dúg-ga, lù-dúg-ga-mu, lù-al-dúg-ga, lù-kal-la, lù-kal-la-mu, lù-al-kal-la, lù-gi-na, lù-gi-na-mu, lù-al-gi-na (Nos. 82 ff.). But this rule does not seem to have been carried out consistently, because names of the same construction, such as lù-gu-la, etc. and lù-banda, etc. (Nos. 163 and 166), are found separated from the group above mentioned.

SIMILAR DOCUMENTS

Some Sumerian lists of personal names have already been published. H. de Génouillac, in the second volume of the Inventaire des Tablettes de Tello, gives us portion of two long lists. I quote from his book, changing only the accents, so as to bring them into accord with those used throughout the volume.

"No. 2942. Liste de noms propres commençant par Lù:
Lù-Iškur, Lù-^aKa-di, Lù-^aGiš-bar-ra, Lù-ma, Lù-ban(da)-da,
*Lu-^aNin-ma-ru(!)*¹, Lù-^aInnana, *Lù-^aEn-*zu, Lù-^aEn-líl, Lù-nibru^{ki}, Lù-šir-pur-la^{ki}, Lù-aṣag, Lù-ṣi, Lù-qal, Lù-na, Lù-bi, Lù-gi-ka-na, Lù-ti-ni-ṣu, Lù-aṣag-gi, Lù-ganum, Lù-dingir-ra, Lù-^dAN, Lù-tul-la, Lù-^dŠu- . . . , Lù-sun, Lù-ša(g)-ga, Lù-gu-la, Lù-kal-la, Lù-!En-ki¹, Lù-ki-àg, Lù-níg-u, Lù-gíd, etc. H.: 70 mm. (2 colonnes)."

It will be noticed that, though the majority of the names occur in the lists published in this volume, their order is entirely different. In the Nippur texts Lù-^dEn-líl would be the very first, this being due to the special consideration which Enlil enjoyed in that city. On the whole, the list above given is very incomplete: few names of gods, and only two names of cities are given. The second text follows:

"2953. Liste (les noms sont par ordre): Ur-gar, Ur-^dEn-ki, Ur-^dNa-rú-a, Ur-lù, Ur-šú, Ur-šag, Ur-ši, Ur-li, Ur-en, Ur-ṣu, Ur-me, Ur-a, Ur-kur-pú, Ur-dun, Ur-tag (REC, 322), Ur-tar, Ur-^dKa-di, Lugal-lù, Lugal-uš, Lugal-bur, Lugal-gú-gal, Lugal-níg, En-ku-li, Lugal-síb, Bā-šá-^dEn-líl, Lugal-gab, Lugal-ṣi, Ga-ti-ṣi, A-ṣi, Maš-tud, Maš-dú, Nam-maḡ, Nam-gi, Be-li-ur-sag, Maš-gu-la, Na-ni, Na-su, Lù-^dnina, Lù-ban(da), ^dEn-ni-lu, Gú-sil-lá, Lù-dingir-ra, Lù-A×GA, Ur-^dBabbar, [. . .]-lu-me-ir, Šar-ru-tâb, Lù-pa(d)-da, Lugal-mu-gu, Lù-si-níg, etc. H.: 120 mm. sur 120 (fragment: 3 colonnes)."

This list is even more irregular than the preceding. While beginning with names in ur- and lugal-, towards its close no definite order of succession is followed. Moreover, some Semitic names are mixed with the Sumerian: Bā-šá-^dEn-líl, ^den-ni-lu, which is probably to be rendered ^dEN-ì-lu, [I]-lu-me-ir, a variant of I-lu-wi-ir and Šar-ru-tâb.

V. Scheil (RT, Vol. XVI, p. 32) publishes a round tablet with the names ur-ḡar, ur-ḡar-du, ur-ḡar-dúg. The first two are found in our lists (Pt. III, 587-88). The last is a phonetic variant of ur-gar-du. In a different work,¹ the same author publishes another round tablet with the names: nin-KA-NE (=šúb-bi?), nin-KA-KA-DUG, nin-sal-la. Only the first of these names is found in our lists (cf. III, 1119, 1171).

DUPLICATES OF PART I

Among the several duplicates of texts belonging to the first part of this volume, some deserve a special mention. Text No. 77 gives us a portion of the Syllabary which had not yet been found in the documents already published. However, as is very common in school texts of that series, the tablet is badly written and so full of scribal errors that it must be regarded as uncertain, until other duplicates either confirm or correct it. Here is a transliteration of the text in question:

Col. I:-ba?-ri-e?;-uš-di-ni;-úr?-na?; za-ni-in-ša;-še-en-sag; ib-ḫu-ru-um; ib-ḫu-ri-anum; ì-lì-ki-ma-a-bi; ì-lì-ki-ma-a-ḫi-ia; ì-lì-a-ti;-anum;-ê-a;

Col. II:; [ia-ḫa]-zum; [ia-ḫa]-du-mu-um; ia-ḫa-zi-nu-um; ba-til-ib-ba-ri(?); a-ḫa-nu-ta; a-ḫa-mar-ši; a-ḫa-nir-ši; ib-ku-ša; ib-ku-^dra(?); ib-ku-^dna-a; si-ma-at-^den-líl; si-ma-at-^dsin; si-ma-at-^dnu-nu; lu-lum; lu-lu-ša; lu-ar-tum;-ša;-ba-ni;

Col. III: a-wil-....; a-wil-....; a-wil-ê?-a?; ku-ru-ut-za; ku-ru-ut-ê-a; ku-ru-ut-iš-tár; šag-ga-ni; nam-mağ-ni; nin-ğé-gál(?); ur-dû-aṣag-ga; ur-síb-sag-ṣu; ur-^dNE-....; im-gur-anum; im-gur-ê-a; im-gur-^dIM; en-ṣu?; en-nin?; en-....-URU; sag-....; sag-....;

A very good proof that this tablet has been unusually badly copied is found in the fact that some complete names must have been omitted. In the Syllabary, as it has been already shown, all names appear in homogeneous groups of three.¹ Here in Col. I we find ib-ḫu-ru-um and ib-ḫu-ri-anum, and the third name of the group is missing. Similarly in Col. II the name ba-til-ib-ba-ri(?) stands alone. Still in Col. II ib-ku-^ana-a is probably an error for ib-ku-^ana-na-a, and in Col. III the sign gur in im-gur-anum, etc. appears written like ib or ur.

Another interesting tablet belonging to Part I is text No. 71. It is the lower portion of a quadrangular prism. The text given, though already found in other documents, offers important variants:

Col. I: 61. [i]-din-anum; 62. i-din-ê-a; 63. i-din-^aIM, instead of the irregular i-din-^asin of other tablets²; 64. ì-lì-pu-ti; 65. ì-lì-a-dab-ti, instead of ì-lì-ga-ti; 66. ì-lì-a-ti; 67. di-wi-ir-a-bi; 68. di-wi-ir-a-ḫi; 69. di-wi-ir-mu-ti; 70. ma-ḫir; 71. ma-ma-ḫir;

Col. II: 97. li-túr; 98. li-túr-šag, a strange variant of li-túr-ru or li-túr-ra; 99. li-mu-TÚR?-TAR, for li-túr-ru-ni?; 100. me-ḫu-nab-ta, probably a scribal error for me-abḫu-ta; 101. me-^aIM, for me-an-ta; 102. me-dur-an-ki, verifying the restoration; 103. me-šeš-kal-la, for šeš-kal-la; 104. me-šeš-ba-tu(gu), for šeš-ba-tu(gu); 105. me-šeš-ki-lul-la, for šeš-ki-lul-la. These last three variants are probably scribal errors. 106. lù-ê-a; 108. lù-ša-lim;

Col. III: 183. ša-at-ma-ma; 184. ša-at-lu-lu; 185. ša-at-^ana-na-a; 186. lugal-gud-maḡ; 187. lugal-dúr-maḡ; 188. lugal-dár-maḡ; 189. ì-lì-am-ra-an-ni; 190. ì-lì-aš-ra-an-ni; ì-lì-ar-, probably a variant of ì-lì-šar-ra-an-ni;

Notice that Col. III restores Nos. 183–89 which had not yet been recovered. It is also interesting to find that the three names compounded with lugal- have been taken bodily, and in the same order, from the Sumerian lists here published (Nos. 208–10).

Col. IV: 1022. gê'me-^dnanna; 1023. gê'me-^dutu; 1024. gê'me-^dda-mu instead of gê'me-^dma-ma?; 1025. šu-mu-um-li-ib-[ši]; 1026. su-mu-um-li-ip-[hur]; 1027. šu-mu-um-li-te-[ir];

This last column definitely assigns Section 1022–1025 to the First Tablet of the Syllabary and adds to it Nos. 1025–27.¹

The last text to be discussed is CBS 7837. It is a duplicate of tablets already published and offers only one variant, but that is of especial importance. In No. 78, instead of lugal-LAGAR+GUNU-e, our tablet has lugal-sib-e. The sign LAGAR+GUNU, which appears written in several different ways, had been read by Langdon as šûb and translated "shepherd." Objection was raised to this identification, chiefly on the ground that the Sumerian word for shepherd is not šûb but sib.² Our text confirms Langdon's translation and partially corrects his reading, thus clearing up difficulties concerning this very puzzling and yet rather common sign.

³ In No. 740, ur-ama-na is preceded by ur-ama. It is therefore clear that the phonetic value of the two signs is ama-na. The sign na might mean "amēlu" but in that case the names following would be difficult of translation. The name lù-al-ama-na makes it clear that ama-na is one word and has an adjectival meaning. Cf. lù-al-dug-ga, lù-al-kal-la, lù-al-gi-na, etc.

⁴ The exact place of the next section is uncertain.

⁵ In this and in the following references the name is transliterated lù-sukal-dingir-ka.

⁶ Mà-gûr = makurru. Cf. SAI 2378 for the identification of the sign gûr and for references.

⁷ Might be lù-kar-ri.

⁸ The order of this and of the following name is inverted in Text 25.

⁹ Certainly ^aNergal. The context clearly proves that this is an appellative of a god.

¹ Cf. Br. 1202.² This is the last name compounded with lù to be found in Text 25.³ The exact place of the next section is uncertain.⁴ Šú probably means "The mighty one." Šú-me-DU might be rendered phonetically šú-men-gen, "The mighty one art thou" (Cf. Note 6 on p. 55). Šú-kalam-ma would then be "The mighty one of the land." Against this interpretation seems to stand the name of the temple É-šú-me-DU. Notice that this name is followed by names of temples.⁵ Probably here "The strong one."⁶ We should have expected lù-banda-mu. Cf. ¹ The restoration of this and of the name following is based on section 619-621. The text in No. 442 has traces which seem to suggest the sign dîm and consequently the restoration ur-me-dîm-ša (Cf. No. 590), but we do not expect the sign me to be used here in two entirely different meanings.

² The exact place of the next section is uncertain.

³ The first sign might not be nin, but is certainly not ur. Either we have here a scribal error, or this is not a personal name.

³ Kúr-sag is probably a phonetic variant for gar-sag, "mountain."

⁵ Sign ngararu. The phonetic value nagar, instead of lamga, seems probable. Cf. ur-^ddim, etc. (Nos. 603 ff.). Instead of "carpenter" nagar may mean here a divine instrument; this would better explain the name ur-nagar-gid-da. But too much stress cannot be laid on this point, considering the artificiality of these lists. ¹ Sign ŠAR. Cf. Br. 4304; SAI 2846. Probably variant for uru (Br. 1018), "The servant of the planter of vegetation," i. e., "cf the husbandman."

² The meaning of "small" for banda is made certain by the name following.

³ The sign is unusually written, but there is no doubt as to the identification.

⁴ The bara-ri-a is synonym with the bara-maḡ. Cf. Zimmern, Kultlieder, 9, b. 4. Animal offerings were brought to the bara-ri-a, AO 55101, Obv. I, 27.

⁵ The bara-si-ga is the nimēdu elliti, "The high pedestal." Cf. Br. 6883 and SAI 4917. The god bara-si-ga is found in CT 24, 8:28.

⁶ Transliterated: gāl-tur-a.

⁷ Written: GĒME+UR. Nig might not be the proper phonetic value of the sign.

⁸ The name might be incomplete. Another sign might be missing after ur.

⁹ One would think of a phonetic variant for urigal (= ŠEŠ-GAL), but this is excluded by the fact that the name ur-urugal is found in another column of the same tablet. Phonetic variants would follow one another in immediate succession.

² Probably a weapon. If so, the phonetic value would be ḡum, "to destroy."

³ Next group may be a variant of Nos. 752 ff.

³ Might also be phonetic writing for giš=edlun, amêlum, but this lection is not supported by the contest.

⁴ Tún=takaltu, a general name for a class of instruments (SAI 9182). The sign could also be read gin=pâšû (SAI 9168).

⁵ The sign ZA might also stand for the numeral IV. I have adopted the reading za because of the following ur-za-na (No. 774).

⁶ Probably an instrument. This name and the preceding ur-tún must be closely related in meaning.

⁷ Cf. II R 30 No. 1, Col. III, 6-7, where za-na pi and za-na-ru pi are translated elût uzûm.

³ The names compounded with nin precede those with šeš in Pt. III, Texts 46 and 50.

⁴ Ki-úr is the lowest part of the earth, and particularly the gate of the underworld (DGL, p. 49).

² This and the following three names are Akkadian.

³ This name is identical in meaning with the one following. É'-a must be an unusual writing for É-a.

⁴ Sign HI. The Akkadian phonetic value tá seems to be required by the context.

⁵ The list closes with ḏnisaba-zaḡ-sal.

⁶ Nos. 1392 to 1458 are from school texts from Yokha (Umma). They are mixed in language, and of difficult interpretation.

⁷ The signs IGI-DU have also the phonetic values: igi-gub, igi-gin, igi-ir, igi-tum, palil, with the general meanings of "to stand or to march in front, to be the chief."

¹ Mu ra, certainly a god, and probably identical with úr-ra, ir-ra. The letter m stands for an original w.

² Za is certainly the name of a deity, as shown by the context.

³ Same as AMA-A-TU, and to be read phonetically amaedu or emedu. Cf. note 3 on p. 65.

⁴ Might be phonetic writing for ša(g) = damāku.

⁵ Del (sign LIS) = iigurtu, some kind of instrument. The real meaning is unknown. Perhaps "to protect, to cover."

² Cf. ama-lul-la in K 2051, Col. IV, 2-4. Repeated three times, the Akkadian translation lacking (DGI., p. 173).

⁴ Cf. preceding note. Sal=rêmu. Nos. 1632-34 may be absolutely identical in meaning.

⁵ Sign Ê+GÊME.
